Summary

Senior Director of Digital Measurement specializing in CTV, streaming, and cross-platform measurement. I work with publishers, advertisers, and platforms to drive better business decisions through privacy-safe, scalable measurement solutions that translate complex data into actionable outcomes.

Over the past decade, I've operated at the intersection of media, advertising, and ad tech, with hands-on experience spanning digital sales, client partnerships, and advanced analytics. My current work focuses on helping stakeholders navigate cross-platform measurement, attribution challenges, and signal loss in an increasingly fragmented media ecosystem.

I work with product and engineering teams on topics including audience measurement, attribution modeling, incrementality, identity resolution, and data quality — ensuring methodologies are both technically sound and commercially meaningful. This includes supporting CTV and streaming measurement, aligning panel and census-level data, and addressing cross-platform comparability in a privacy-first environment.

I'm particularly interested in the evolution of measurement standards, data governance, and the future of cross-media analytics as the industry adapts to privacy regulation, cookie deprecation, and platform fragmentation.

Always open to connecting with leaders focused on measurement strategy, data-driven growth, and building trust in modern media analytics.
